WE PROUDLY PRESENT . . .

THE 1947 WYO

being an annual publication of, by and for the Associated Students of the University of Wyoming, Laramie.

The University of Wyoming, of course, offers us a priceless experience. On the other hand, this book cost four dollars and fifty cents. In the inevitable comparisons that must follow, there are some things you ought to keep in mind:

First, editors are petty people who deal with other petty people. Consequently, editors are always getting irritated and are always of the opinion that the typewriter and blue pencil are mightier than the printed form, the big pencil. Note, therefore, the use of pettiness in this book—of which we, of course, repeat. Sometimes.

Second, you should remember that problems of logistics are not isolated in the Third you may have occasion to recall that Wyoming as a state and as a nation is a place in which we believe. If, sometimes, you discover editorial evidence of an overweening pride in Wyoming, we hope you will not be embarrassed. We hope you will respond . . .

With its back to the rapidly expanding campus, the once-proud firstborn of the University rests — senile, settled. No ivy softens its dated facade, no attempts at renovation have materially improved the utility; and not even sixty years of wind and weather have completely integrated Old Main.

NOTICE OF ACTION ON
COMMUNICATION TO FACULTY
March 1947

All year long it has been a nip-and-tuck, running battle between the multitude of complex problems with which post-war days have beset education and the University's administration. No sooner is one onslaught under the control of institutional heads than another pops up, calling for midnight-to-midnight oil-burning.

The constant struggle of the administration to keep ahead, even abreast of developments occasioned by the unprecedented influx of students, the high cost of living, the housing shortage, the paucity of instructors—this struggle, being little understood, is probably little appreciated. But it goes on.

One of the hardest-pressed divisions of the administration is the office handling veterans' affairs. It has done a creditable job under handicaps. The registrar's office, processing hundreds more students than ever before, has come through with a minimum of complaints. Buildings and grounds, faced with the task of maintaining living quarters for veterans who unbelievably continue to arrive, have erected enough Butler huts and temporary dormitories to house a small army. And the deans of men and women, with their problems increasing in proportion to the enrollment, have borne up commendably, keeping the situation well under control.

With millions of dollars placed at their disposal by the 1947 state legislature, a Memorial Fund Drive in progress, and mental shirtsleeves rolled high, the men and women of the administration have taken the responsible load squarely upon their shoulders.

Board of Trustees

GOVERNOR HUNT
Ex-officio Friend

Ably headed by Milward L. Simpson, the board of trustees has successfully faced a multitude of staggering expansion problems, and while some of the battles are not yet won, the outcome of none of them is in doubt. The University, in the hands of these capable Wyomingites, will continue to progress.

A. L. Keeney
Dean of Men

There's this...

Already one of the best-liked and most respected men on the faculty, Dean Keeney has been dean of men at the University but a year. The Dean combines rare understanding with a superior personality in successfully guiding two thousand men students.

E. Luella Galliver
Dean of Women

Long experience and a quick insight into the doings of the girls on campus give Dean Galliver plenty of ability to oversee feminine activities at Wyoming. The Dean's counsel and advice during her years of service have been of immeasurable value to women students.

and then there's this

We remember registration . . .

Elliott Hays takes a payment at the business office.

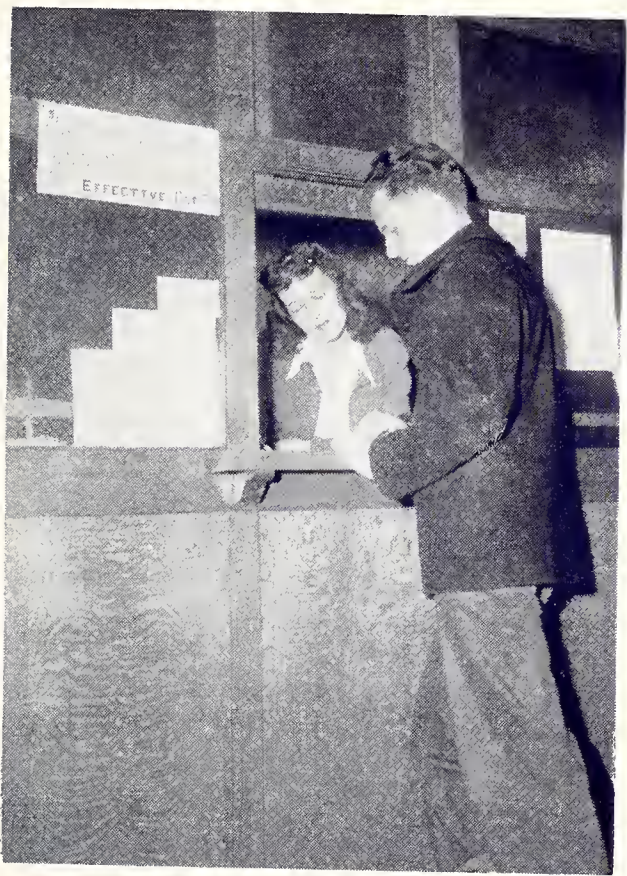

Mr. Biggs, journalism, helps the would-be journalist Vince Karl.

... for what it really was!

Neal Bate at the Registrar's window.

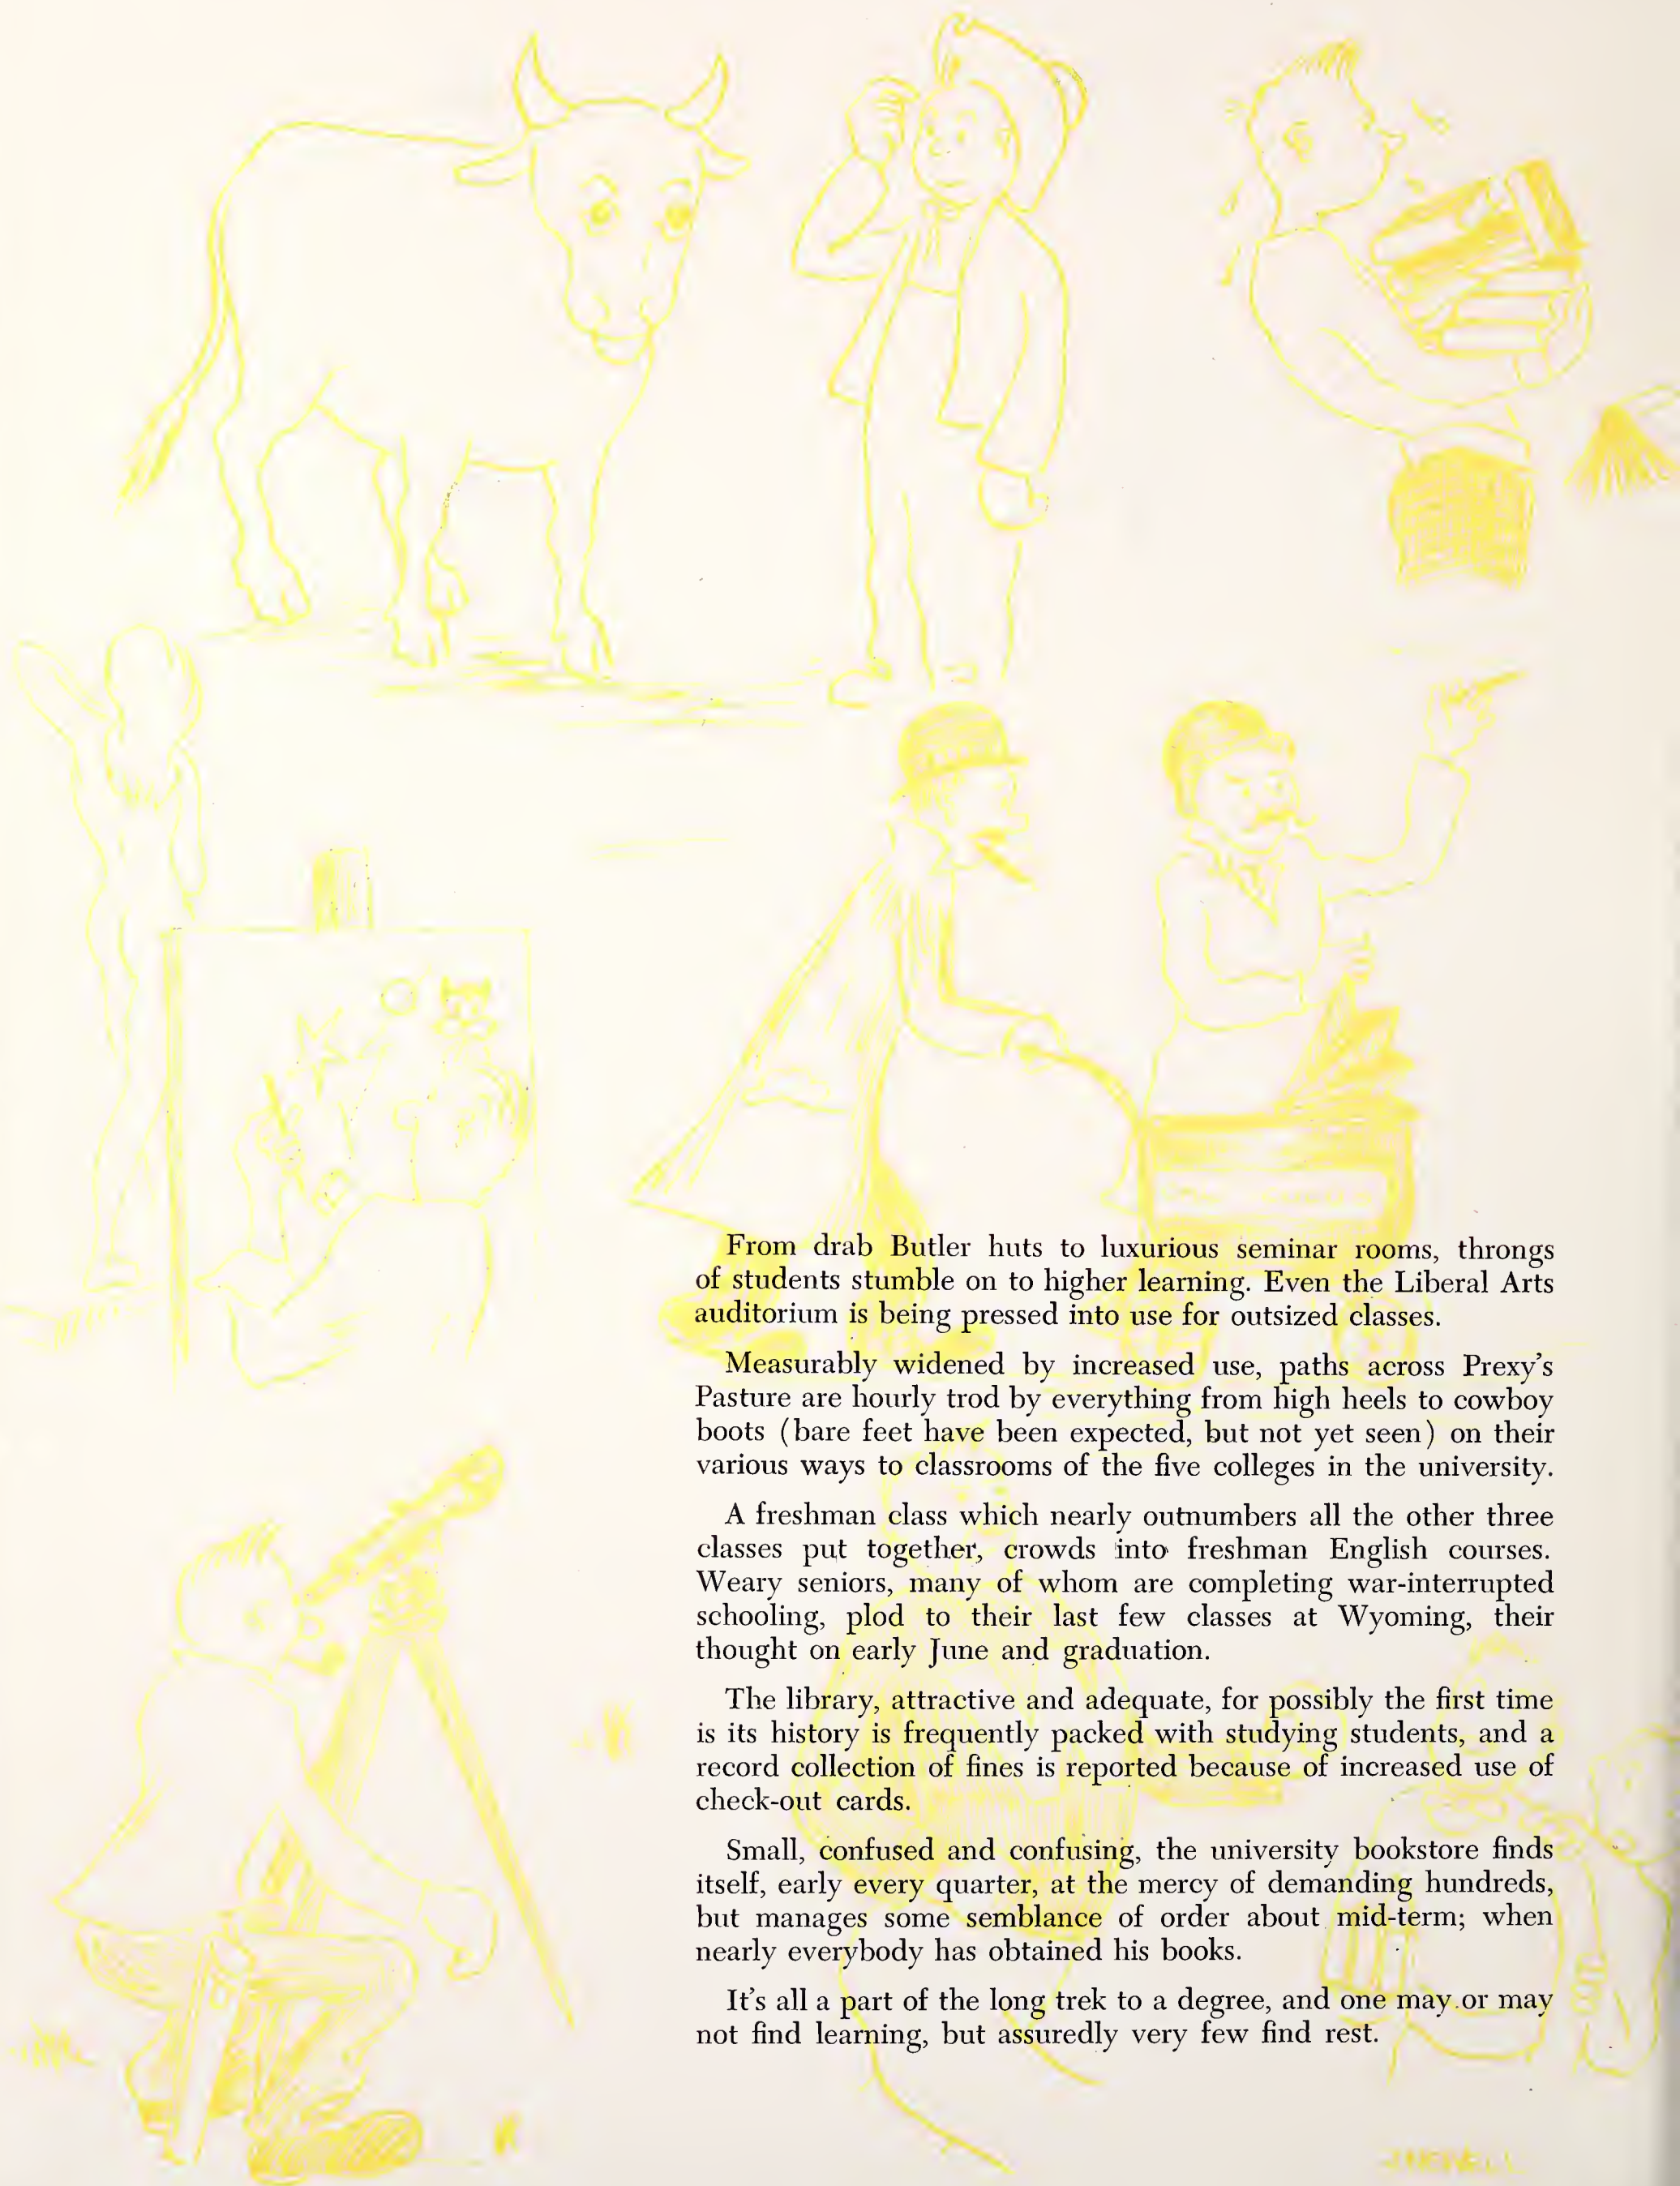

Seldom regarded as more than a functional part of the University, Engineering Hall displays structural beauty, perfectly proportioned. Paraphernalia - bearing engineers scurry about unseeing. Students not of the figure-and-formula faith, seeing only its reputation as a home of hard work, look away.

Matriculation

From drab Butler huts to luxurious seminar rooms, throngs of students stumble on to higher learning. Even the Liberal Arts auditorium is being pressed into use for outsized classes.

Measurably widened by increased use, paths across Prexy's Pasture are hourly trod by everything from high heels to cowboy boots (bare feet have been expected, but not yet seen) on their various ways to classrooms of the five colleges in the university.

A freshman class which nearly outnumbers all the other three classes put together, crowds into freshman English courses. Weary seniors, many of whom are completing war-interrupted schooling, plod to their last few classes at Wyoming, their thought on early June and graduation.

The library, attractive and adequate, for possibly the first time in its history is frequently packed with studying students, and a record collection of fines is reported because of increased use of check-out cards.

Small, confused and confusing, the university bookstore finds itself, early every quarter, at the mercy of demanding hundreds, but manages some semblance of order about mid-term; when nearly everybody has obtained his books.

It's all a part of the long trek to a degree, and one may or may not find learning, but assuredly very few find rest.

The Student Senate

TOM BELL
Student Body President

A Student Senate faced with innumerable problems—including revision of the ASUW constitution—tried its near-best, accomplished some good and made a minimum of mistakes during a year that featured little good and many mistakes on the part of several.

Charged with responsibility and gifted with powers that few outside the senate realize or appreciate, this small group—composed of less than one one-hundredth of the student body—continues to leave room for improvement, but such improvement is up to the student body, not necessarily the senate itself.

Most of the Senate's important work is referred to committees. These are a few of the more important ones.

Freshmen

Free from home at last, they spring,
fresh-foaled and foolish
Dreams akindle, eyes aglow, rosy-checked and eager
For what may come.
What comes they miss; what goes departs unnoticed—

Base of operations for chattering co-eds and posturing men, the Student Union provides both the recreational and business facilities for the campus. Cluttered lounge and crowded fountain proclaim its indispensable usefulness. To many, the Union IS the University.

Participation

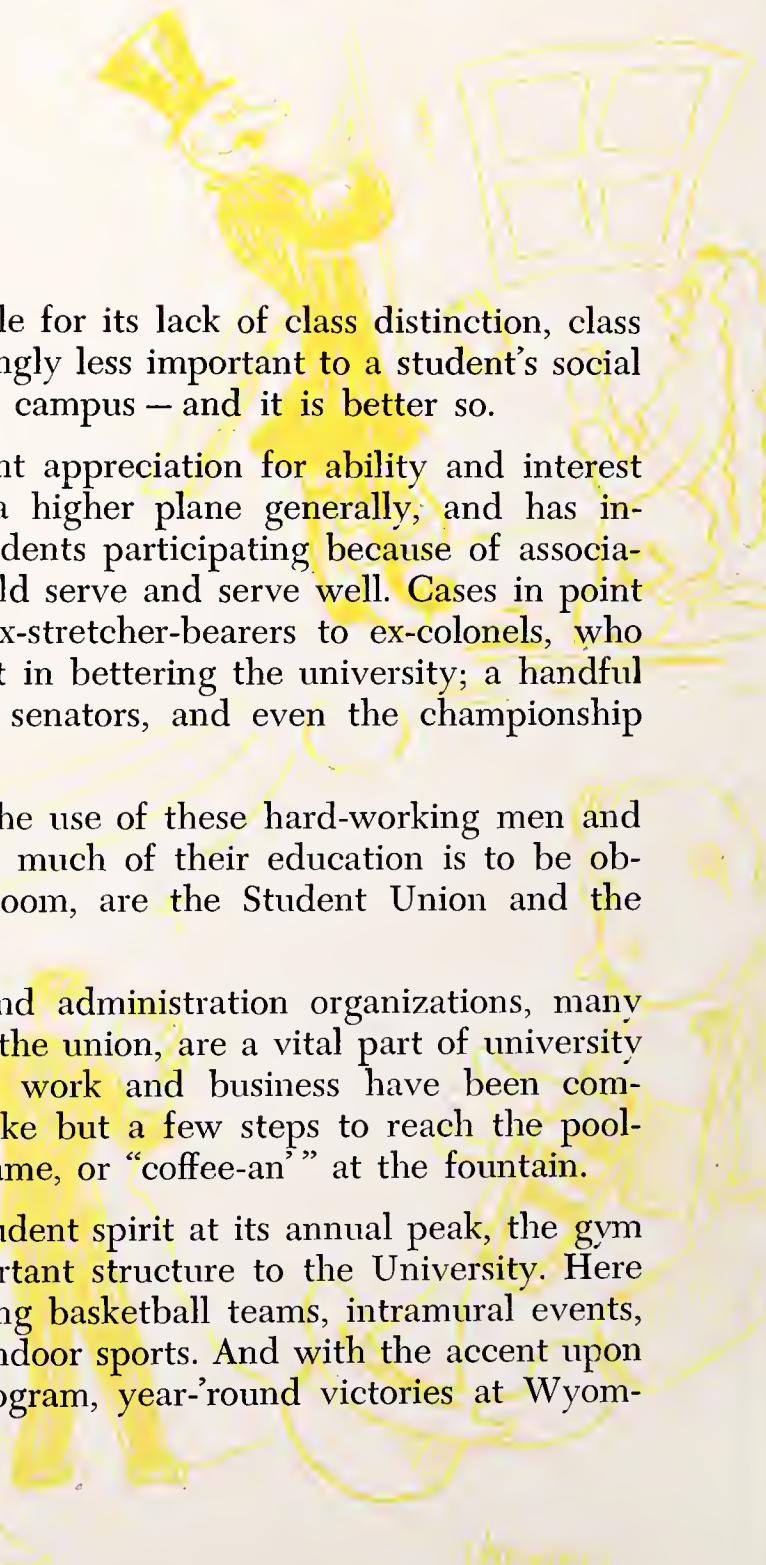

In an institution notable for its lack of class distinction, class rank has become increasingly less important to a student's social and political standing on campus — and it is better so.

Improvement of student appreciation for ability and interest has placed activities on a higher plane generally; and has increased the return to students participating because of association with those who would serve and serve well. Cases in point include veterans, from ex-stretcher-bearers to ex-colonels, who have taken an active part in bettering the university; a handful of conscientious student senators, and even the championship basketball team.

Readily available for the use of these hard-working men and women, who realize that much of their education is to be obtained outside the classroom, are the Student Union and the gymnasium.

Activities in service and administration organizations, many of which headquarter in the union, are a vital part of university life. Conveniently, when work and business have been completed, members must take but a few steps to reach the pool-room; a lounge bridge game, or "coffee-an'" at the fountain.

Winter residence of student spirit at its annual peak, the gym continues to be an important structure to the University. Here is the home of outstanding basketball teams, intramural events, several other important indoor sports. And with the accent upon an expanded athletic program, year-round victories at Wyoming seem assured.

The Student Union

EDNA TICHAC
Director of the Union

Very few at Wyoming care to hit their first morning class without coffee, and the life-giving juice is dispensed at the rate of nearly 40 pounds daily over an eternally-attended Union fountain: adequate evidence that UW students do drink something besides beer.

But the Union means much more: it gives comfort between classes, a welcome relief from hard classroom chairs; it is a meeting place of men and women, minds and matters; it is the initial point of parties, picnics and even politics; and it is much more . . .

Working, playing

Drinking coke;

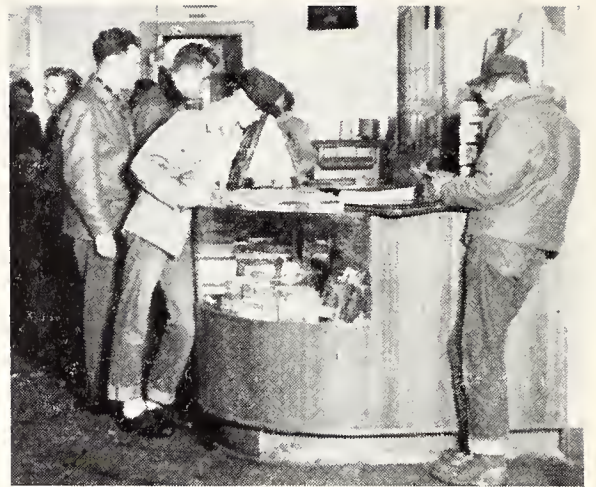

Taking ten

To have a smoke

The Union has its Camels, Luckies, Colliers, Liberty, etc.

"Loud o'er the fountain . . ."

"Fades the day none too soon."

But Wyoming's Compton is unique.

Dramatic efforts at the University of Wyoming during the past year were awarded a difficult-to-understand lack of student support.

Some of the hardest work done by the dramatics department was, of necessity, making second-hand, much-used props and costumes suffice for the ambitious program of productions presented.

Playing to houses not even half-filled, casts and directors quite naturally found it hard to gain anything but experience from their attempts.

Theta Alpha Phi

National Dramatic Honorary

The aim of the organization is to promote a greater interest in dramatics and the University Theatre, and to develop theatrical talent. Each year the society presents awards to those who are outstanding in the fields of dramatic presentation and technical stage work.

This year Theta Alpha Phi sponsored and took on tour over the state the first summer school production, Hasty Heart. The play was met by enthusiastic audiences in every town played. Other plays produced in the summer session were, Shakespeare's Comedy of Errors and the Broadway hit Soldier's Wife.

Above and beyond their regular activities this season, which included one of the most ambitious penthouse productions yet attempted, the dramatic group secured from the Museum of Modern Art a series of all-time classic motion pictures.

Folk Dancers

Membership is open to students, faculty and employees on the campus. The purpose is to preserve and promote interest in folk dancing. Instruction is given at each meeting, weekly, in square dancing, quadrilles, schottisches, waltzes, etc. An exhibition group is drawn from members to present various phases of dancing.

Dick Patterson is the president.

Music hath charms, but like drama at the University of Wyoming, musical endeavors of campus talent and instructors go unrecognized by a large percentage of the student body.

Despite this prevalent neglect, the university music department continues to keep abreast and even ahead of the modern trends of the day, presenting several outstanding amateur artists of the campus in programs spaced through the year.

Although they, too, are not overwhelmed by student body gratitude, members of the university band turn out, fair weather or foul (which it usually is), for football games, and spark spirited evenings in the gym during basketball season.

The Glee Club appeared in a concert for an assembly winter quarter. In spring quarter they presented Debussy's "Blessed Damosel", a lyric tone poem. Mae Fern Hames and Joyce Black were soloists.

Miss Ford also directs the Women's Ensemble. The Ensemble presented a Christmas program for the Kiwanis Club, sang between halves at a basketball game, appeared on a fall quarter music program, and sang several sacred numbers the Religious Emphasis Assembly.

University Chorus

The Chorus presented the oratorio "The Creation" by Haydn in Cheyenne and at Saint Matthew's Cathedral in Laramie. Solo parts were taken by advanced voice students. The Chorus is under the direction of Mr. George Gunn and is accompanied by Mr. McKinnon.

Sometimes it is difficult to know which came first, the chicken or the egg, and the analogy fits the relationship between the University of Wyoming's publications and the student body. No one knows whether unity and spirit on the campus would improve if the publications were improved, or whether improved spirit and unity would better the publications.

To some it would seem that if you like fried chicken, you must not poach the egg and, by the same token, if you like poached eggs, don't fry the chicken that lays them.

These are the people responsible for the changes the 1947 WYO has assumed and attempted to inaugurate.

The book is a binding together of: Donn Driscoll's multitude of ideas, ingenious writing ability and hard work; Bill Brack's enthusiasm; Irving Feinstein's (sub-divisional abstractions) and Hungate's (Greek pins) artistic ability.

We've worked and tried hard; we've made a lot of mistakes, but we hope you like it.

Barney Cole
Business Manager

The 1947 WYO is a lot of little things and, we hope, a few big ones.

You've noticed there are quite a few changes. We've tried to get a larger sum out of the usual material parts. Possibly you didn't find your pictures in the usual places. Student interests have been divided into the scholastic and social divisions, which we feel are the two most important determining factors in campus life. Possibly you don't like some of the things that have been said. We have felt it was time cellophane were substituted for the crepe paper usually serving as editorial wrapping. Possibly we've excluded several important elements, for which we're sorry—but for these exclusions alone.

We've worked on every phase of the book, with little or no file scraping. A list of people whose abilities have been tapped in order to widen the book's effect would read like the Student Directory. No two pages of scattered pictures could begin to do justice to either the list of contributors or the efforts expounded. To camera-shy Pyle, Taggart, Coulehan, Vivion, Newell, Lowe, Beavers, Krogsdale, et al.; to John Scott Williams for the divisional building sketches; to photographer Harvey for his cooperation; mere mention is a violet serving for orchids.

For the most part the groups included in this section fulfill the one function of offering an organization to almost anybody who wants to belong to one. With this one exception, their objectives are obscure and their activities, if any, unheard of excluding those which are successful because of student participation and not because of sponsorship.

Few ex-servicemen on the campus like to think of themselves as "veterans." There comes a time in every student's career, however, when rooming, boarding and electing are of prime importance. Quick to realize what a majority they could muster if necessary, leaders arose, dues were lowered and ranks were bolstered. Housing problems were looked into. Meal tickets (later scorned by Commons patronizers) were obtained after lengthy polls of eating habits. Letters were written giving the rest of the problems an airing and Washington's attitude. Nothing campus-shaking has resulted.

Senator O'Mahoney gives the veterans a few answers . . .

Undoubtedly the most popular outdoor sport at Wyoming is skiing. The popularity is shown by both the prevalence of ski racks atop student body cars and the week-end caravans to either the Snowy Range or the Summit ski areas.

Four classes, with a total enrollment of 110 students, are held each week for those wishing to learn how to ski and those wishing to improve.

One of the things THE '47 WYO did on time this year was organize a "Welcome Home" reception for Coach Ev Shelton and the Cowboy basketball team after their eventful eastern tour. Even then, the ROTC "duck" carrying the band, cheerleaders and Mrs. Shelton arrived at the depot a little late.

But the affair came off successfully with a uniquely large turnout, and Ev and the boys seemed appropriately grateful.

*N*OT so extensively used this year because of the many post-war exemptions from physical education, the gym has, nevertheless, retained its standing as the home of blood, sweat and tears at Wyoming.

Here championship cage teams still play their outstanding brand of basketball; here intramural hoopsters still strive on toward the campus top-spot; here is the home of Wyoming's representatives in such minor sports as wrestling and swimming; yes, here is the rich earth of the half-acre wherein are planted the young saplings from which great athletes, and, what is even more important, true sportsmen, grow.

"Ev Shelton has done it again," mumbled rabid Wyoming basketball fans after the carefully-coached Cowboy cage team all but sewed by their second-straight conference championshi pwith a tense 32-26 victory over Utah at Laramie March 1.

A week later the Punchers had the Conference championship clinched with a 46-36 victory over Colorado at Boulder and a 52-38 bruiser taken from Colorado Aggies at Ft. Collins.

The 1947 conference championship was the fourth Big Seven title for Ev Shelton-coached Wyoming teams in seven seasons, a record that is unsurpassed in the conference.

A dash of sadness was thrown on Wyoming jubilation when the Punchers lost their opening NCAA western playoff game to Texas as Kansas City 42-40, after completely dominating the play during the game.

Wyoming led the Texans 40-39 with a little more than three minutes to play. With a minute yet to go and the lead still intact, a Wyoming pass went awry and Texas took the ball and the game.

Four seniors ended their collegiate careers ofr Wyoming. They were Jim Reese and Floyd Volker, co-captains of the Wyoming team; Lou Roney, and Ted Rogers.

Reese had the unparalleled distinction of playing on three conference championship teams, one NCAA western championship team, and a national championship five in his three seasons at Wyoming. He was an almost unanimous all-conference.

Floyd Volker received mention for all-American in addition to also being an almost unanimous selection to all-conference teams. Volker was known as the greatest defensive player in the nation and held such stars as Jack Houser, conference scoring champion from Denver U.; Utah's all-American Arnold Ferrin; Colorado's Lee Robbins; Brigham Young's Brady Walker; and Texas' all-American John Hargis, completely in check.

Mike Todorovich, junior Wyoming center also made many all-conference teams and was selected all-Western.

The Cowboys had an iron-man five with Mack Peyton and Jimmie Reese at forwards, Mike Todorovich at center, and Jim Collins and Floyd Volker at guards. Ted Rogers was used as a ball-control substitute, and John Pilch, freshman, was an able substitute for Todorovich.

Team play was a standout feature of the 1947 Cowboy cagers. Ev Shelton said frequently that he had never coached a team with a finer team spirit than this year's Punchers displayed.

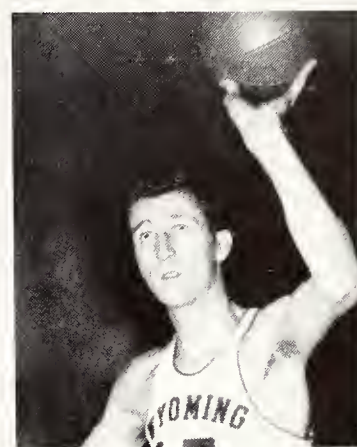

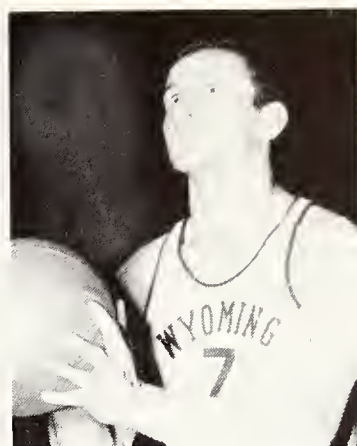

The team opened the season with a seven-game winning streak which included a pair of 36-35 and 45-35 wins from Washington State, considered the second-best team in the Pacific Coast conference this year.

Embarking on an eastern tour, the Cowboys hit snags in USCLA at Buffalo, N. Y.; CCNY in Madison Square Garden; and Temple in Philadelphia; before returning to the win column with a thrilling 58-57 over Holy Cross at Cleveland and an easy 68-55 victory over Valparaiso at Gary, Indiana.

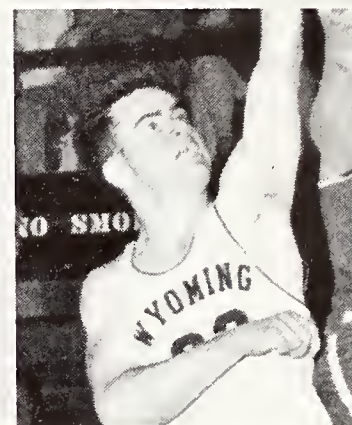

Returning home, the Punchers settled down to defending the Big Seven conference championship. They opened at home, with a 60-30 win from Colorado Aggies.

Travelling to Logan for a game with Utah State the Cowboys took the Aggies 43-34. The Utags had upset Utah 50-49 the night before in Salt Lake.

The next weekend Wyoming had a comparatively easy time winning 51-44 from Brigham Young in Salt Lake City but with Mike Todorovich handicapped by a sprained ankle, spotted Utah a 15-3 lead, found it too much to overcome, and lost their first conference game of the season to the Utes 50-42 at Salt Lake.

Lind, B-team forward, drives in unsuccessfully on Casper Junior college's basket as Robinson, Reerink and Doerr look on.

The Punchers journeyed to Reno, Nevada for a pair of games. Coach Shelton surprised the Wolves by starting his second team. The reserves played the first half of the opening game and led 31-29. But it took the regulars to pull through with a 51-49 decision. The second game became very rough as the Cowboys won 49-42.

With only a day's rest Wyoming came back from Reno and met Denver U. in Denver City Auditorium. The game, however, found Mike Todorovich in great form and his 22 points led Wyoming to a 63-38 win.

This led to the thriller of the year at Laramie. Wyoming trailed Colorado 29-17 at half-time and with 13 minutes left to play were still 12 points behind. But a great surging Cowboy rally, urged on by yelling, screaming fans gave the Punchers a 42-41 lead with four minutes left to go.

The Cowboys stalled successfully for three minutes and forty-five seconds when Les Metzger of CU stole the ball. Metzger was fouled by Collins and with a chance to tie and win the game missed both free throws. Wyoming won 42-41.

Wyoming swept through their next three games defeating Utah State 60-45, Denver University 38-52, and Brigham Young 70-47, the latter game seeing Reese score 18 points the first half. Then came the big Utah game.

Utah arrived in Laramie leading the conference by a half game, left town trailing the Cowboys by a half game.

Mike Todorovich held the vaunted Vern Gardner to one basket and Floyd Volker was brilliant in sweeping both backboards clean for the Cowboys. The Punchers trailed at half 19-16, but for ten minutes of the second half their brilliant defense held Utah scoreless and allowed them to build a 26-19 lead and later a 31-21 margin.

Wyoming moved through Colorado and Colorado Aggies to clinch the conference championship, then lost to Texas and Oregon State in the wesetrn playoffs.

The Cowboys had the distinction of having defeated both the NCAA national champions and the Madison Square Garden Invitational winner during the season. Holy Cross romped through the NCAA and Utah blitzed its way through the Garden tournament finally defeating Kentucky's "unbeatable" quintet for the championship.

When the Cowboys came home from their eastern trip, the student body was at the station to meet them. Aboard an ROTC "duck" they were paraded to the Union steps for a pep rally. Pictures of the rally may be found on page 131.

It is every Spur's purpose to promote school spirit, support school activities and uphold the traditions of the University. In order to do this, Spurs are picked from every organized woman's group on the campus for their interest and participation in college activities. The Spurs have had a busy and ambitious year: ushering for University plays and A.W.S. assemblies, cheering as a section at all basketball games, helping with the Red Cross drive and bridge tournament, providing entertainment for the basketball games, helping with the Red Cross drive and bridge tournament, providing entertainment for the basketball game halves, and making the student body "campus conscious" in order to improve the grounds.

Gardner, Cinnamon, Black and Flaharty help President Humphrey during the state legislators visit.

Spur mascot Anita Louise Rohn helps Maureen Smith out with the cheerleading.

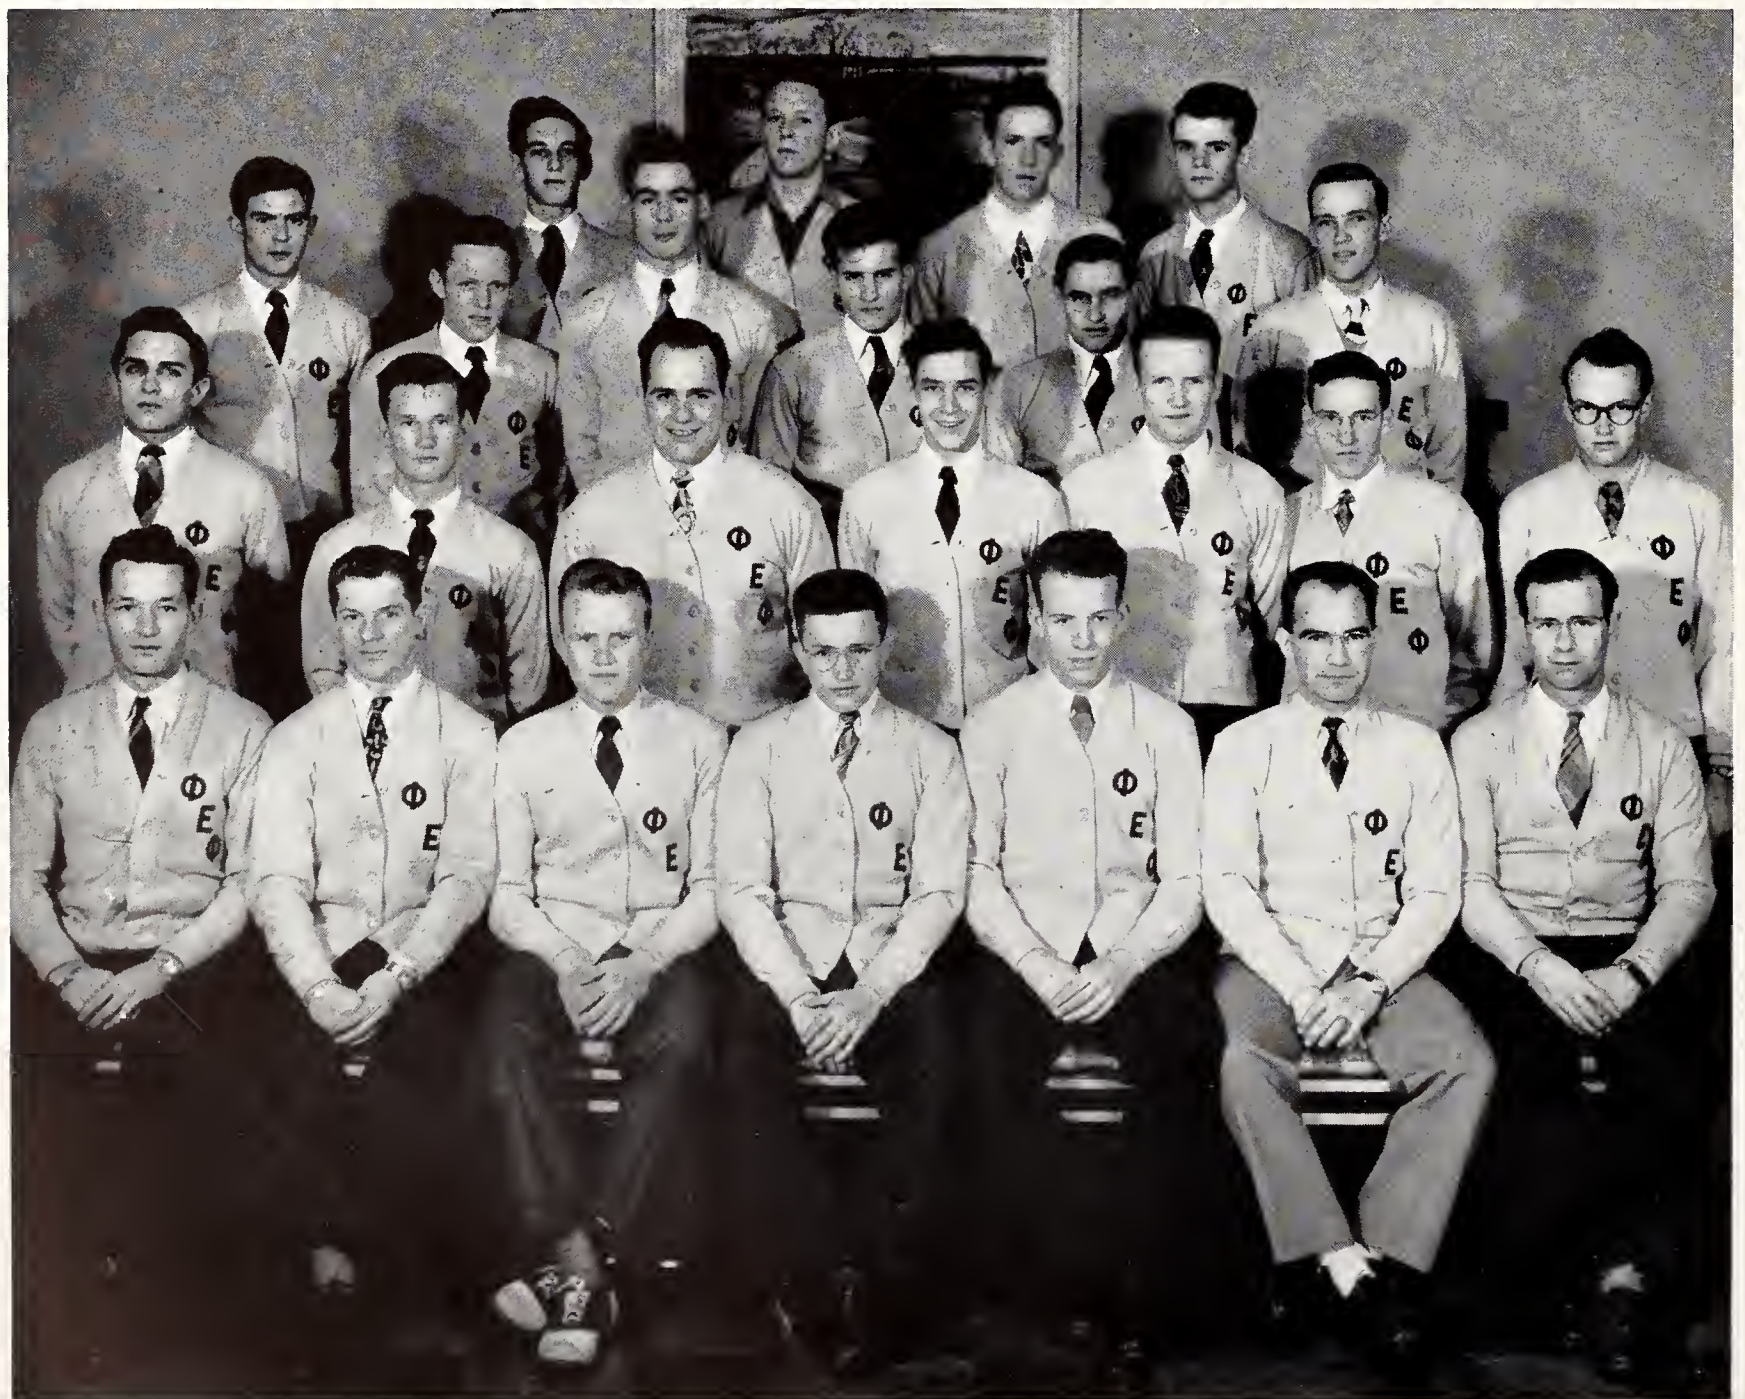

Phi Eps are the fellows in the bright yellow sweaters sitting in a block at football and basketball games. The purpose of the organization is the letters of their name spelled backwards. The group was reactivated in the spring of '46 when five members were chosen from each men's social organization on the campus.

Apparently trapped by Criss, Rainwater and Rohn, Elliot, Minnesota back, eluded the Punchers and scampered for 23 yards.

Wyoming's 1946 football team, returning to the gridiron wars after a three-year absence, came up with a powerful line generally regarded as one of the conference's best. But with injuries handicapping the scoring punch, the Cowboys found themselves on the short end of the score most of the time. There were, however, high spots in th tough ten-game season that saw the Punchers win one, tie one, and lose eight.

HANK KOLASINSKI

Cannon Parkins (U) fumbles as George Waters (W), number 24, moves in to recover on Wyoming's 36-yard line.

Jimmy O'Brien raced 95 yards with the opening kickoff at Salt Lake and when Hank Rohn kicked the extra point Wyoming led Utah 7-0. The Cowboys battled the Utes until the final gun, far outgaining the highly-favored Utah eleven, but were defeated 27-7.

The next week at Brigham Young an 87-yard touchdown run by Hank Kolasinski was nullified early in the game, but Hank Rohn booted a 27-yard field goal to give Wyoming a 3-0 halftime lead. The Cougars struck once in the last half but it was enough to give them a 6-3 win.

In a homecoming game which saw the last quarter played in almost total darkness Denver U. defeated Wyoming 19-6. Bob Cooper ran the second half kickoff back for a touchdown for Wyoming's score. The game was started an hour and a half late when Denver was late arriving due to heavy snow blanketing the area.

Wyoming marched 57 yards to an early score with Hank Kolasinski taking the ball over the goal line and Larry Martoglio kicking the extra point, but Utah State was too powerful and defeated the Cowboys at Logan 21-7. Utah State tied Denver for the 1946 Conference championship.

In the final game of the season at Kezar Stadium in San Francisco, the Punchers were lethargic, taking a 39-7 trouncing from the University of San Francisco Dons. Only bright spot of the game for Wyoming was J. B. Ford's 90-yard run with a kickoff which scored for Wyoming.

Wyoming started the season off right with a 7-0 win from Colorado State at Laramie. Walt Andre threw a pass to Bob Cooper and Cooper raced 40 yards for the score.

Morris Lubarsky grabbed a fumble and ran 90 yards for the only Wyoming touchdown as the Punchers and Colorado Mines tied 7-7.

A dearth of Wyoming touchdowns followed as the team lost on successive Saturdays to Colorado Aggies 7-0, Colorado University 20-0, and Minnesota 46-0. The Minnesota game was played in Minneapolis before 46,000 people.

Henry Kolasinski, a pile driving back from Massachusetts, was rated one of the best fullbacks in the conference. Most sports writers thought enough of his playing to name him all-conference.

Jim Clayton, 240-pound behemoth tackled from Lander, was Wyoming's other almost unanimous all-conference selection. Clayton's runing mate at tackle, John Kosich made Chet Nelson's Rocky Mountain News all-conference team.

The Cowboys had seven men playing their last season for the Brown and Gold of Wyoming. They were Warren Capellan, Robert Cooper, Tony Katana, Morris Lubarsky, Ray Novotny, Harry Planck, and Henry Rohn. There will be 21 lettermen returning for the 1947 season.

Bernard F. Oakes coached the Punchers through the 1946 season. His staff included Harry Thayer as line coach, Leonard A. Coffman backfield coach, Henry A. Brown as freshman coach and Dick Bostwick and Lou Thorpe as assistants.

After coaching the Punchers through the 1941, 1942, and 1946 seasons Coach Oakes designed as head coach in the spring of 1947. He has been replaced by Bowden Wyatt, former Tennessee all-American end and assistant coach at Mississippi State.

Coach Wyatt chose a staff of Dick Hitt, line coach; Leonard Coffman, backfield coach, and John W. Bailey, freshman coach, to assist him.

ATO'S vs. Phi Delts

The intramural program at Wyoming prides itself in the fact that any organized group on the campus can participate in athletic competition. Two leagues have been set up, the Fraternity and the Independent, with a playoff at the end of each sport or a collected score of the various league members, depending on the type of activity.

Because many of the sports are played on Prexy's Pasture and because every contestant has local backers, the events are always well attended. Competition runs high in the players; fighting for medals, cups, pieces of shirt, and occasionally a keg of beer.

Wyoming's ROTC was activated last spring under the command of Lt. Colonel Frank R. Loyd, veteran of the Phillipine campaign. Colonel Loyd upon taking command of the unit contacted all veterans and made an advanced military class from these ranks. When fall quarter started the Colonel's command included the pictured officers and non-coms plus some 300 students.

Numerous physical and mental examinations were given at the beginning of the year to select members of the advanced course. In fall quarter the corps worked on its marching ability and used Homecoming as an opportunity to show it off. During winter quarter they pursued theory, leaving the classroom for drill on Prexy's a few times a week. Spring quarter featured a well rounded city program, executed by the corps under the sponsorship of the American Legion and planned by Lt. Colonel Ortenzi.

Men's Residence Hall is possibly the only typical amalgamation of all campus social forces. Here live men from all the colleges, from all the organizations and from all parts of the state. Being far from a residence, the hall is aptly called "Men's Dorm".

"Party!"

Down the long halls, far across Prexy's Pasture, upstairs and downstairs, sounds the cry. Books are dropped, studies abandoned and forgotten in the mad scramble to join the party, what or where it may be seeming of little consequence.

Wyoming is an institution of parties, some joyously simple and some heavily elaborate, but "have fun!" is the password to almost any social function, formal or otherwise.

The social year at Wyoming means a tightly packed calendar, with seldom a free weekend from quarter to quarter.

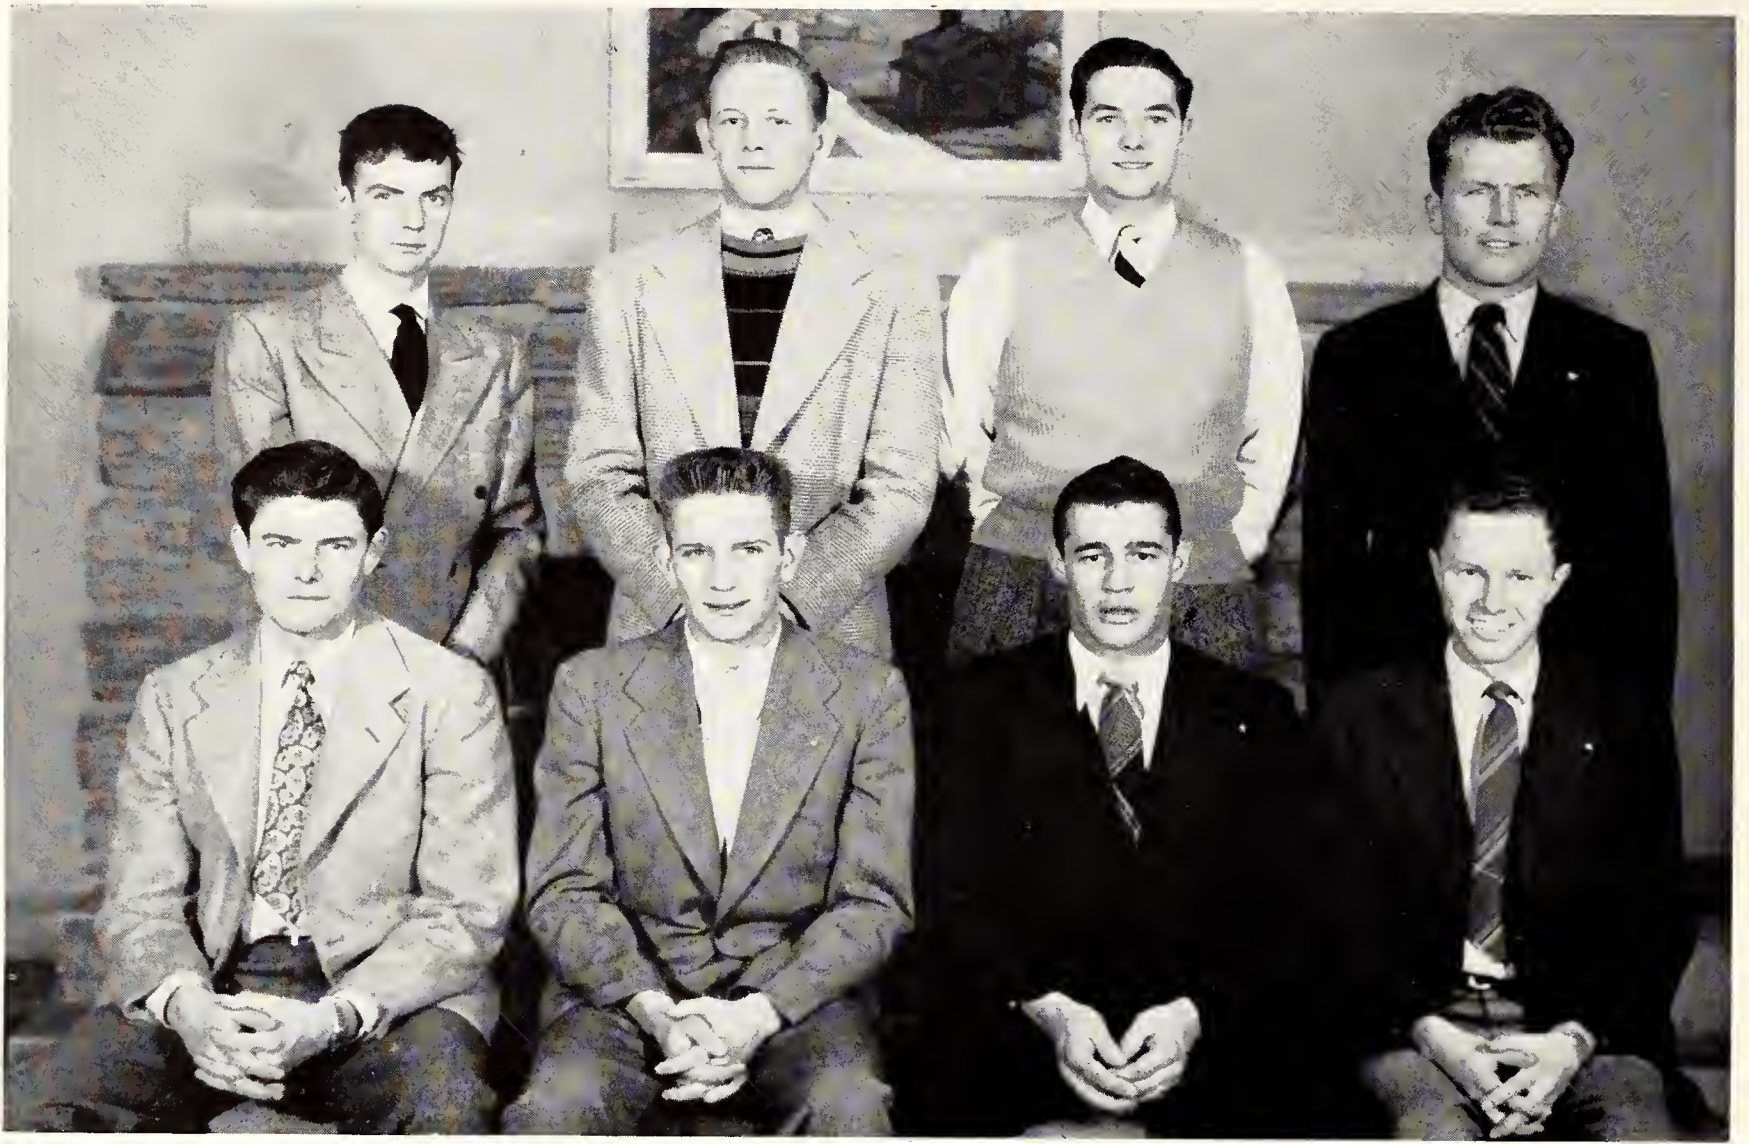

On-campus it means a hectic rush-week, football games and formals, then "Where ya goin' vacation?" Comes winter quarter and the glut of the fantastic Greek dances, basketball so red-hot the bars run out of ice shortly after each game, where knees are too weak for dancing. In the spring, on-campus affairs retreat into the background, and an occasional poor day is the only thing that can drive people indoors.

It's off-campus-every-chance-you-get in spring, when Laramie is so beautiful everyone has to get out into the country. Picnics, beer-busts, and just plain fresh-air jaunts take up most of the spare time of people who have been thinking of last spring's picnics, beer-busts and just jaunts all winter long.

Inter-fraternity Council

Primary purpose of the council is to consider all questions of inter-fraternity relationship both to further the interests of the University and to foster closer cooperation and better understanding between the fraternities. Each fraternity elects two members to represent it on the council. This year the council sponsored a matinee dance for the March of Dimes during winter quarter and the annual Inter-fraternity ball during spring quarter.

Any woman affiliated with a national women's fraternity is a member of a larger group called Pan-hellenic. The council represents elected members from the six sororities on the campus. Their purpose is to sponsor friendly relations and a cooperative spirit between all affiliated women, and to make rules regarding rushing and rush week activities. Each year Pan-hellenic sponsors a ball and an honors banquet.

ALPHA TAU OMEGA

Known appropriately as the "joy-boys" of the campus, Taus have earned a reputation for attendance at pep rallies and other campus events, principally, it might be supposed, because they love a party. ATO also is noted for frequent serenading and a dampish dance, the Bowery Ball, an annual feature of winter quarter.

Taus to be listed among top campus contributors are Carroll "Red" Osborn, student senator of stature, Who's Who; Keith McNinch, Who's Who; Phil House, stager of successful Homecoming last fall, president of Commerce club.

KAPPA SIGMA

Secure in their closet-less house, the only fraternity home in Fraternity Park, the Kappa Sigs have made their name as hosts at pretty parties. Intramurally, the Kappa Sigs were untouchable in hockey.

Well known for active participation in campus activities are Buzz Hacker, organizer of athletic student support; Bob Bauder, Varsity Show director who tried and cried hard; Don Koerting, pianist and composer; and Bob McCracken.

PHI DELTA THETA

The Phi Delts are noted for a few things: affinity for Christmas trees (o.p.'s), twice consecutive winners of Homecoming Sing, a rip-roarin' ride—with hay—for fall funning (and the usual follow-up conversation with Keeney the next morning), and the '45-'46 scholarship award.

PDT's who deserve mention as contributors to the University include Bud Daniels, winner of Fellowship award; Hank Kolasinski, all-conference fullback; Harry House, Who's Who; Walt Miller, A.S.U.W. student manager.

SIGMA ALPHA EPSILON

The Tenth Street Athletic club, beards and all, bounced back to exceed pre-war strength and throw the Bushmen's Hop, one of the several beery blowouts of the year, which event, of course, places them near the top by campus standards.

Sig Alphas whose contributions to the university merit mention include Jimmie Reese, nationally recognized cage star; Jim Clayton, all-conference tackle of '46; Al Lokanc, all-conference and captain of the '46 baseball squad; Tom Sawyer, a campus sparkplug; Roger Loving, talented designer of Varsity Show sets and proposed Memorial Stadium; Chuck Chamison, always around when someone needs music.

SIGMA NU

Hot intramurally, the Snakes are also pointing toward regaining posession of their beloved scholarship cup, which has been in other hands this year. Mostly a quiet group and quartered 'way off campus, the Snakes nevertheless hold, in their own way, a wet little whing-ding for some reason called the Chanticleer. It begins with an early ayem picnic and has been known to continue for days.

Snakes who have distinguished themselves for service to the university include Floyd Volker, all-conference co-captain of the Cowboy cagers; and Tom Bell, president of student senate.

SIGMA PHI EPSILON

Working against tremendous odds, Sig Ep has emerged from a scratch start to become a full-fledged, spirited addition to campus Greek groups. Outstanding social event for the Sig Eps during the year was their Queen of Hearts ball, first of what will be an annual affair.

Dynamo of the Sig Ep chapter and valuable campus-wise is Gus Fleischli.

Homecoming, 1946

It was unusual to say the least.

The engineers chased the lawyer-protected queen finalists to the lobby of Cheyenne's Plains hotel.

A parade of floats, flags, and walking people was obscured by the usual 1946 football season's Saturday snow fall.

Night football was introduced to Wyoming when the Denver Pioneers failed to make the scheduled rendezvous—the only trouble was, Corbett Field is without a lighting system.

The Homecoming Sing (bless it!) came off without a hitch.

If you were holding a dance or ball this year, electing a queen was the thing to do. Few organizations on the campus passed up the opportunity. If the ones we have included are not the most important ones, they are the most traditional; if not the most traditional, they are the ones prior to deadline. Anyway, Miss Petrich did all right for herself.

Nearly two hundred men, with little in common except the roof over their heads, are crammed into the men's dorm this year. Although a little cramped for space, dorm life for the men is pretty much the same routine as B. C. BETA THETA ALPHA Neophytes, fighting for a place under Apollo, the BTA's have come a long way their first year on the campus. The psuedo-Betas have already become known for their noise, in-group and immediate success in intramurals. As yet no contributors to the university have emerged.

Beta Theta Alpha was installed at Wyoming in 1947.

LAMBDA DELTA SIGMA

Large scale fellowship is the strong point of LDS. Add in a dash of intramural excellence, conscientiousness and anonymity. They also have a fine place to gather.

Mormons who are outstanding in service to the university include Bill Eads, hard worker; Gene Chase, scrupulous senator.

Lambda Delta Sigma was founded at Utah University, 1937. Beta Omega and Beta Alpha chapters were installed at Wyoming in 1937.

The Campus . . .

. . . can be remembered in a multitude of ways. We like to think you'll remember these three ways best of all: the paths through the older part of the campus coming from downtown Laramie; the black-topped chimney, spotlighted every night; and the winter-time beauty of the pines and cottonwoods after a snowfall.

Buildings

All over the place

26 March 1947

When the dawn's early light broke over the campus this Wednesday morning and the sleepy eyes of punctual eight o'clockers turned skyward, it was not "the broad stripes and bright stars" that were gallantly streaming. It was, in fact, the "Stars and Bars" of the Confederacy. All day the campus whispered and laughed, poked sides and stared. It was unquestionably the stunt of the year.

The pranksters have remained anonymous, hence there still are conversations as to what they really had in mind.

Some Believe

(The Republican Boomerang, 26 March 1947)

"... University officials were at a loss to explain the circumstances behind last night's flagraising.

"... it seems to be apparent that there are some loyal southerners who figured that recent events might warrant a little bit of flag waving.

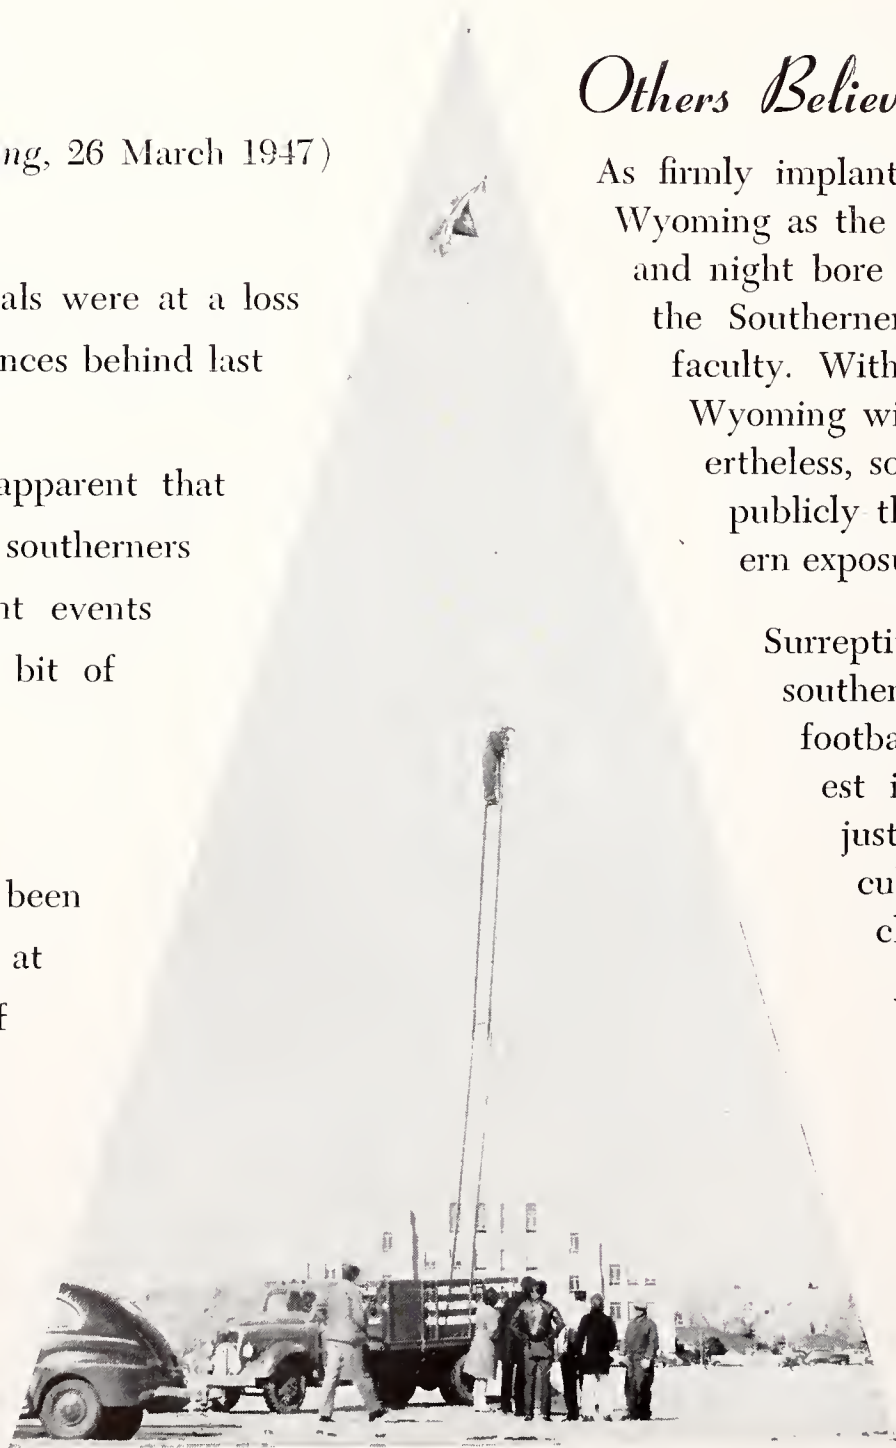

"... it might have been put up to signify joy at the recent invasion of the University athletic staff by some stalwart sons from below the Mason-Dixon line."

Others Believe

As firmly implanted at the University of Wyoming as the flagpole which for a day and night bore the "Stars and Bars" are the Southerners now included in the faculty. With speech as free as the Wyoming wind, there has been, nevertheless, some reluctance to discuss publicly the newly-acquired southern exposure.

Surreptitious jokes about the southern accent placed upon football and some of the poorest imitations ever heard of just plain southern accents culminated in the so-far unclaimed gag with the flag.

Whatever their motive, the perpetrators of the stunt can carry the secret to their graves, content with the thought that, although their act chilled some, it certainly thrilled others.
